The Importance of Learning Environment and Stages of Development in Teaching

The project Swiss Snow League will be briefly presented, and the relation between the different levels and stages of development is explained. Afterwards, the teenagers and their needs are described in order to underline the conclusions that had influenced the project Swiss Snow Academy. The differences in both projects, i.e. SSLE and SSAC, will be explained. Furthermore, we would like to discuss the importance of the adaptation of teaching methods according to the age of the learners.

Initiative for Snowsports: Switzerland

Regrettably, it is no longer taken for granted that children should practise snowsports. Many children have not even stepped onto a ski piste. The Initiative for Snowsports: Switzerland seeks to halt this trend and maintain and strengthen snowsports as a Swiss cultural heritage. The Initiative for Snowsports: Switzerland, of which Swiss Snowsports is a founding member, presents a national platform for instructors and schools, offering information about snowsports. It also provides all-inclusive and favourably discounted offers for snowsport days-out and camps.

From guest to snow sports instructor

Ski schools certainly depend on their guests. However, they also need experienced and qualified instructors. By means of interesting ski school offers as well as flowing transition between learners and teachers, Swiss Snowsports aims to raise motivation in young snow sports enthusiasts to become professional snow sports instructors. Today's guest may become tomorrow's teachers. We are happy to explain you our educational structures that make this idea possible.
